

October 09, 2025: On How X is Destroying the World

1 Corinthians 6:18-20
New American Bible (Revised Edition)

18 Avoid immorality. Every other sin a person commits is outside the body, but the immoral person sins against his own body.[a] 19 Do you not know that your body is a temple[b] of the holy Spirit within you, whom you have from God, and that you are not your own? 20 For you have been purchased at a price. Therefore glorify God in your body.

Manager of Veteran X: an older, more experienced friend of veteran X

“Hey, buddy, let me help you complete those extremely complicated and tedious military benefit forms that cause so many of the other (non-club member) veterans so many problems!”

Veteran X: a former citizens of the community at large that is now conditioned to be a citizen of the state

“Wow, thanks, comrade! These forms are absolutely horrific on my newly formed killer’s brain. I was having difficult with these forms before I was subjected to all of the abuse inside of the military, now they are absolutely impossible! I would very much appreciate your help to navigate this giant, overly complicated, and horribly unfair system!:

Manager of Veteran X: an older, more experienced friend of veteran X

“Okay, comrade! We have a deal - but remember . . . everything in the military is about backing up your brother in arms! No soldier left behind! Who Ra?

Veteran X: a former citizens of the community at large that is now conditioned to be a citizen of the state

“You Ra!”

Doctor of Veteran X: an insider ‘doctor’ that knows the ropes

“Hello, Veteran X, nice to see you today. Please fill out these forms and include every single thing that your Manager discussed with you yesterday.”

“Ah, yes, Veteran X, I can not see what the problem was with this approval request prior to us arriving on scene. I assure you that everything will be sorted out in an iffy-jiffy! Who Ra?

Veteran X: a former citizens of the community at large that is now conditioned to be a citizen of the state

“You Ra!”

[files overly complicated and completely indecipherable federal form to their completely immoral and unconcerned comrade within the completely opaque and unaccountable federal agency.]

Spouse of Veteran X: a loving spouse happy to see that their loved one is finally receiving progress and sad to see others suffering in the system that they just passed through

“YAY! I knew that, if you just continued doing the right thing, everything would work out for us!”

Veteran X: a former citizens of the community at large that is now conditioned to be a citizen of the state

“Yes, that’s right. My good work is finally paying off.”

“Hey, why don’t you go take advantage ... err. .. go have some much needed and medically necessary procedures done as well - now that we are finally achieving the level of benefits that we truly deserve. Who Ra?

Spouse of Veteran X: a loving spouse happy to see that their loved one is finally receiving progress and sad to see others suffering in the system that they just passed through

“You RA!”

Doctor of Veteran X: an insider ‘doctor’ that knows the ropes

“Hello, Spouse of Veteran X, nice to see you today. Please fill out these forms and include every single thing that your Spouse’s Manager discussed with your Spouse yesterday.”

[files overly complicated and completely indecipherable federal form to their completely immoral and unconcerned comrade within the completely opaque and unaccountable federal agency.]

[Meanwhile. . . benefits payments begin to arrive in the accounts of Veteran X]

Manager of Veteran X: an older, more experienced friend of veteran X

“Hey, comrade! Looks like things are picking up for you am-I-right?”

“Remember that the military code is that no brother-in-arms is ever left behind! Who RA?”

Veteran X: a former citizens of the community at large that is now conditioned to be a citizen of the state

“You RA.”

Manager of Veteran X: an older, more experienced friend of veteran X

“You look like you could use some more benefits in your life. Go see our comrade X in Business X and they’ll be sure to ‘hook you up’ with the best Veteran Discounts around! Who RA?”

Veteran X: a former citizens of the community at large that is now conditioned to be a citizen of the state

“You RA!”

Business X: Blow Out Veteran Sales!

“We support our troops and absolutely love the country of uh... what country is this again? America? Yea, uh we love America!”

Veteran X: a former citizens of the community at large that is now conditioned to be a citizen of the state

Hello, I uh.. heard that you have a good sale going.

Business X: Blow Out Veteran Sales!

“Oh yes! Have we got a deal for you! Go see Employee X in sales and they will be sure to ‘hook you up’! Who Ra?”

Veteran X: a former citizens of the community at large that is now conditioned to be a citizen of the state

“You Ra!”

Employee of Business X: Working his way of the ‘ladder’ of corporate excess

“Well, hello Veteran X! Thank you for your service! Now, how would you like to pay for these cheaply made and overly priced imported goods by which I seek to feed my beautiful children?”

Veteran X: a former citizens of the community at large that is now conditioned to be a citizen of the state

“Well, by the American tax dollar, of course! Who Ra?”

Employee of Business X: Working his way of the ‘ladder’ of corporate excess

“You Ra!”

Immigrant Employee of Business X: Legally questionable and definitely scared of being shipped back to the ‘corruption’ of his former father-land

“I love America! Thank you for your service! Master, Where should I deliver these overly priced and foreign produced cheaply made products by which that other country is enslaving those poor souls in a world not as great as the USA?”

Employee of Business X: Working his way of the ‘ladder’ of corporate excess

“Anywhere I tell you! You’re lucky to even be able to stay in this great country of ‘Murica - you’re lucky I don’t reported you to ICE and have them arrest you! Who RA?”

Immigrant Employee of Business X: Legally questionable and definitely scared of being shipped back to the ‘corruption’ of his former father-land

“You Ra.” [and mopes away to deliver the overly priced and cheaply made foreign goods]

Country X: the Country formerly known as the United States of America

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/investigations/interactive/2025/veterans-affairs-fraud-fake-disability-cases/>

The screenshot shows a dark-themed website interface. On the left, a white box contains the headline: “An Army Veteran told VA he was Paralyzed” (and Can Not See). Below it, a smaller line of text reads: An Army veteran told VA he was paralyzed. In the center, a white subscription pop-up is displayed. It says: Get unlimited access to The Washington Post. Below this, it lists benefits: ✓ Unlimited access on the web and in our apps and ✓ 24/7 live news updates. There are three pricing options: One-week $7 (one-time payment), Monthly $1 (every week), and Yearly $40 (for the first year). A note states: Monthly billed as $4 every 4 weeks for first year. Cancel anytime. Below the pricing is a field to Add your email address and buttons for PayPal and Card. A Subscribe button is in the top right corner. On the right, a video thumbnail shows a person in an orange shirt and camouflage pants with their arm raised in a crowd.

The screenshot shows the DAV (Disabled American Veterans) website. At the top left is the DAV logo. At the top right is a link: FIND A DAV LOCATION. Below the logo is a navigation bar with three links: GET HELP NOW, WHAT WE DO, and WAYS TO GIVE. The main content area has a large grey box with the headline: DAV'S RESPONSE TO SHAMEFUL WASHINGTON POST ARTICLE SUGGESTING OUR NATION'S VETERANS ARE GAMING THE VA DISABILITY SYSTEM. Below this is a breadcrumb trail: Home > News & Media > News > DAV's response to shameful Washington Post article suggesting our nation are gaming the VA disability system. Below the breadcrumb is the text: POSTED ON OCT 8, 2025 BY COLEMAN NEE | NATIONAL COMMANDER. On the left is a portrait of Coleman Nee, a man with grey hair wearing a suit and tie. To the right of the portrait is the text:

DAV (Disabled American Veterans) was shocked and disgusted to read the recent article by The Washington Post alleging that disabled veterans are “swamping” the VA with “false”, “fraudulent” and “dubious” disability claims for injuries and illnesses that are not legitimate. Nothing could be farther from the truth and the Post should be ashamed of publishing such an inaccurate and distorted piece.

The article points to the large number of veterans

MILITARY LIFE / VETERANS

A Rubber Stamp with One VA staffer rubber-stamped benefits at 20 times the normal rate. That could be bad news for vets. Selective eyesight (He can Not See)

Lauded by some as a 'hero without a cape,' a VA staffer who blindly approved tens of thousands of benefit packages actually missed many claims, leaving some veterans underpaid.

DREW F. LAWRENCE / PUBLISHED OCT 7, 2025 1:39 PM EDT

Federal News Network

House Democrats press
Johnson to bring Pay Our Troops Act to the floor early...

14 hours ago • By Anastasia Obis

Democrat and Republican

"The House is done": Johnson rules out stand-alone vote on paying troops during shutdown

21 hours ago • By Kate Santaliz

Politicians can Not See!

Republican defense cardinal throws weight behind bill to pay troops during shutdown

36 minutes ago • By Meredith Hill & Benjamin Guggenheim

Yahoo

The military usually gets paid during government shutdowns. Here's why they might not this time around.

16 hours ago • By Mike Bebernes

Full Coverage

VETERANS FAKING BLINDNESS Troops definitely can Not See

VA assigns veterans a disability rating from 0 to 100 percent based on the combined severity of their ailments. That rating determines how much they are paid. Last year, disabled veterans on average had a rating of 70 percent and received $25,046 for seven disabilities, VA figures show. The tax-free payments typically last for life and come on top of free or subsidized VA medical care. 7

Barry Wayne Hoover		U.S. Navy seal
NAVY VETERAN 5 YEARS OF SERVICE
DISABILITY RATING	100%
CRIME COMMITTED	Theft of government funds and making false statements
SENTENCE	27 months prison, $429,568 in restitution
DISABILITIES	Blindness (retinitis pigmentosa)

World X

III THE CLASSICAL MEDITERRANEAN: 8 THE WANING OF THE CLASSICAL WEST

The damage showed both in the towns and in imperial fiscal practice. From the third century onwards many towns shrank in size and prosperity; their early medieval successors were only pale reflexions of the important places they once had been. One cause was the increasing demands of the imperial tax-collectors. From the beginning of the fourth century the depreciation of coin led imperial officials to levy taxes in kind – they could often be used directly to supply local garrisons but were also the means of payment to civil servants – and this not only made the government more unpopular, but also the curiales or municipal office-holders who had the task of raising these impositions. By 300 they often had to be forced to take office, a sure sign that a once sought-after dignity had become a strenuous obligation. Some towns suffered from actual physical damage, too, especially those in the frontier regions. Significantly, as the third century wore on, towns well within the frontier began to rebuild (or build for the first time) walls for their protection. Rome began again to fortify itself soon after 270. (I won't participate)

Meanwhile, the army steadily grew bigger. If the barbarians were to be kept out it had to be paid, fed and equipped. If the barbarians were not kept out there would be tribute to pay to them instead. And there was not only the barbarian to contend with. Only in Africa was the imperial frontier reasonably secure against Rome's neighbours (because there were no neighbours there who mattered). In Asia things were much grimmer. Ever since the days of Sulla a cold war with Parthia had flared up from time to time into full-scale campaigning. Two things prevented the Romans and Parthians from ever really setting down peacefully. One was the overlapping of their spheres of interest. This was most obvious in Armenia, a kingdom which was alternately a buffer and shuttlecock between them for a century and a half, but the Parthians also dabbled in the disturbed waters of Jewish unrest, another sensitive matter for Rome. The other factor making for disturbance was the temptation presented to Rome time and time again by Parthia's own internal dynastic troubles. (Barbarians once needed to create the Army)
(previously consumed)(lost) (abandoned)

(Maccabean Revolts)
(Unclean spiritual nourishments)

Such facts had led in the second century AD to intense fighting over Armenia, its details often obscure. Severus eventually penetrated Mesopotamia but had to withdraw; the Mesopotamian valleys were too far away. The Romans were trying to do too much and faced the classic problem of over-extended imperialism. But their opponents were tiring and at low ebb, too. Parthian written records are fragmentary, but the tale of exhaustion and growing incompetence emerges from a coinage declining into unintelligibility and blurred derivations from earlier Hellenized designs. (What is good for money now? Food and vice)

In the third century Parthia disappeared, but the threat to Rome from the East did not. A turning-point was reached in the history of the old area of Persian civilization. In about 225 a king called Ardashir (later known in the West as Artaxerxes) killed the last king of Parthia and was crowned in Ctesiphon. He was to re-create the Achaemenid empire of Persia under a new dynasty, the Sassanids; it would be Rome's greatest antagonist for more than four hundred years. There was much continuity here; the Sassanid empire was Zoroastrian, as Parthia had been, and evoked the Achaemenid tradition as Parthia had done.

(There are too many connections to be a coincidence. This is a designed destruction)

(SYRIA = ASSYRIA) (300 years of struggles)

World X

Gene-Tile
(Masons)

The Sinner is 'taxed' - and the tax is collected by the - sulted in the cultural disdain reflected in the phrase
"tax collector and sinner" (Lk 15.1-2; Mt 18.17 uses the alternative, equally dismissive, "tax collector and Gentile"). The auxiliary forces who represented the immediate face of Roman power were composed of troops from surrounding areas with inherited ethnic hatreds for the population they policed. Soldiers might extort goods and services at random from the local populace (Mt 5.41). However, legionary centurions who retired in a region where they had served might also be valuable local patrons (Lk 7.1-10). Physicians attached to army units could also serve the populace on the side (Mk 5.26).

Soon, let's discuss:

On the Ways in Which Morals are Replaced by Opportunities; and
On the Ways in Which Immoral Opportunists Replace a Moral Family.

(Donald Trump and Elon Musk are immoral opportunists that are camping their illegal spy-craft inside of our home and will not stop 'shaking' and 'agitating' a response in their little video game of horrors. Get the Fuck Out of Our House, Uncle - Peeping - Tom!)

(Seriously, Texas Government, you really need to re-evaluate the relationship that the State of Texas Shares with the Spying, Artificial-Insemination-Harem Producing, WannaBee Satan of Musk - On - El) (An enabler of the largest illegal spying operation in world history!)

(TeXas, YOU ARE COMPLICIT IN THIS ATROCITY OF AMERICAN INJUSTICE!)
(NEVER FORGET!)